

EVERYONE WANTS TO BE PART OF A SUPERYACHT “NEW BUILD”.

Why? Perhaps it’s because you have the unique opportunity to “get it right the first time!”

Maybe it’s the many elements of creativity about the process. Maybe it’s the opportunity to be land-based for a while and a huge change from normal yachting daily operations. Whatever the reason you are involved in a build you’ll want to be familiar with the expectations that the Build Captain will have of you. Your aim is to build the best yacht for the Owner and all the crew that will subsequently work onboard that yacht!

Our professional performance always goes well when we are clear about our goal posts and the expectations of our role. Although you know your onboard crew role well, being part of a land-based build team is quite different. Crew involved in a ‘new build’ in effect become business managers, not regular crew as you are used to seeing yourself.

Dealing with shipyard personnel, owner’s representatives, project managers, the owner and family, suppliers, government officials, yacht designers and the rest of the build team, it’s imperative that your communication skills and business skills are up to par and that you are able to represent yourself and your build team in a professional and effective manner to get the job done correctly.

There is no doubt that this senior training would benefit you greatly if you are to be involved in a New Build at some point in your career.

This course deals with the following subject areas:

- The Specification and all the relevant terms - Contracts, Change orders, GA, etc.
- Financial Processes and decision-making
- Project Schedule; a huge topic with myriad boxes to tick including personnel matters, roles defined, housing for the team, transportation, interior supplies...
- Moving the yacht, Sea Trials,
- Proforma administrative examples

How “Distance Education” works: You can elect to be posted the printed book and assignment, but the quickest method is to download a link to the files. We then send you the book to read and the assignment to complete, and during this process should you need to contact us to discuss any element of the text, please feel free to ‘Skype’ when necessary.

About the Assignment: The assignment consists of short answer and a little project but is not difficult. It just requires some thought and planning.

For further information or to register, please fill out the registration form below and email it to us at Crew@SuperyachtCrew.com.au. Once received, you will be provided with confirmation of your enrolment, along with an invoice and instructions on how to start your course!
